

One desk. Five markets. The math doesn't hold.

Why a lean Singapore TA team hiring across the region keeps losing candidates it should be closing.

THE STRUCTURAL PROBLEM

It's not more hiring. It's different hiring.

- 01 One req pulls candidates from Singapore, the Philippines, and Malaysia at once — each pool with different fluency, pay expectations, and availability.
- 02 Volume arrives in spikes, not a drip — 200 roles for a new contact center, not a steady trickle.
- 03 You're verifying who's actually on the call for a delivery center your team may never visit in person.

WHAT'S ACTUALLY BREAKING

Four things stall a lean team every time.

- 01 Resumes don't test the job — over 70% of screening interviews industry-wide end up run on candidates who turn out unqualified.
- 02 A generalist recruiter in Singapore is asked to judge a backend engineer in Vietnam.
- 03 Top candidates are gone within days of a slow, multi-week process.
- 04 Tools built for US/UK English keep misfiring on APAC accents.

HOW IT ACTUALLY WORKS

One agent. Every market. Same bar.

- 01 Sally runs adaptive voice interviews calibrated for APAC accents — Singapore, KL, Jakarta, Ho Chi Minh City, same questions and criteria.
- 02 Configurable drill-down (Low / Medium / High) lets a non-technical recruiter go deep on the one skill that actually matters.
- 03 Optional video adds a legitimacy signal without slowing the interview down.
- 04 Runs 24/7 across time zones — a candidate in Jakarta screens on their own clock.

WHAT IT ACTUALLY COSTS

18 minutes.

An 8-minute technical screen plus a 10-minute culture-fit interview is billed as 18 minutes, total — not per interview, per minute actually used. That's what makes screening every market from one HQ affordable at volume, not just possible.

— PROOF, NOT PROMISES

Already trusted at enterprise scale.

A major financial institution's pilot was rigorous enough to secure board-level IT approval for a full enterprise rollout. A global EdTech company at $150M+ revenue moved from a strategic pilot straight to full-scale implementation. In Singapore itself, a regional partner has enabled a bid for a large-scale international government tender.

YOUR MOVE

Screen every market. One bar.

If your Singapore desk is hiring 25+ people a quarter across the region, the manual model that worked at lower volume won't hold at this one.

Book a demo — see Sally run on your actual open roles

Full breakdown → link in comments ↓